London, May 18.

Yesterday arrived a Mail from France, and another from Flanders.

Constantinople, April 13.

DURING the Time the late Ambassador from Persia continued here, he was constantly entertained with Marks of the greatest Civility and Esteem; nevertheless, 'tis said that secret Orders were given by the Port to watch him very narrowly, and to prevent with the utmost Carefulness that could be, his Meeting with any Opportunity of conversing with the Ministers of Christian Princes: This Course the Port judged to be necessary, from a Suspicion conceived that the Ambassador was sent hither, not so much upon Account of congratulating the Grand Signior on Account of the Circumcision of the Prince his two Sons, as to spy into the warlike Preparations of the Port, and the true State of the Turkish Affairs with Regard to the Princes of Christendom: It is said further, that a certain Minister used all the Endeavours possible to see this Persian Ambassador, but could never succeed.

Lisbon, April 16. Don Pedro de Figueyredo de Alarcam, Commander of the Citadel of Ota, Chief Alcaide of the City of Covilha, formerly Envoy Extraordinary to France in the Reign of King Peter II. died last Week in this City, and was buried with his Ancestors in the Church of our Lady of the Incarnation of Lobagueira. Advice is received by a Courier from Don Louis d'Acunha, the Portuguese Minister at Paris, that the Count de Ericeyra, formerly Viceroy of the Portuguese Dominions in the East-Indies, being sailed for Goa in order to return to this Kingdom, had the Misfortune to be taken by Pyrates near Madagascar: That the Pyrates plundered all his Effects, rifled the Portuguese Ship where the Count was embarked, and then set him on Shore upon the Island of Bourbon: That he re-embarked some Days afterwards on board a French East-India Ship, and is now safely arrived at a Port in Brittany.

Stockholm, May 6. On the 2d Instant three Memorials were read in the Senate, which M. Rumpf, the States General's Resident, had presented to the King; the first related to the Placard about the Precautions to be observed for preventing Infection; the Dutch Merchants have complained against some Articles in this Placard, and therefore the Memorial is ordered to be laid before the Board of Trade for their Advice. The other two Memorials related to particular Demands of some Dutch Merchants, and are to be laid before the Admiralties of Carelscroon and Gottenberg. Two French Ships from Bourdeaux, laden with Brandy, lye under Quarantain at the Dablers. A Ship from Lubbeck, whose Certificates were not examined by any of the King of Sweden's Ministers, has been obliged to return.

Dantzick, May 9. The last Express which the Duke of Mecklenbourg received here from the Muscovite Court, is said to have brought him Advice of the Czar's being sick; which has given great Concern to the Duke, and to the Dutchess of Mecklenbourg.

Paris, May 23. On the 21st Instant, the Duke of Orleans visited the Apartments at Versailles, and 'tis believed the King will go thither the 2d of next Month. The Plague being almost ceased in Languedoc, the Gevaudan, and the Vivarets, the Marschal de Berwick is expected here towards the Beginning of next Month. On the 18th, when the first President of the Parliament attended to present the Remonstrances to the King, the Duke of Orleans required the President to leave them, telling him they should be laid before his Majesty, who would let the Parliament know his Royal Intentions concerning them on the 19th, at 11 in the Morning. . . . Accordingly, the President and the Members attended at the Hour appointed, and the Chancellour signified to them in the King's Name, " That the King will be obeyed. . . . expressly ordering them to register his Majesty's Declaration concerning the Customs; which, at length the Parliament submitted to perform on the 20th Instant. The following is a List of the Officers who are appointed to officiate at the King's Coronation, viz. The Duke of Orleans is to represent the Duke of Burgundy, the Duke of Aquitaine is to be represented by the Duke of Chartres, the Duke of Normandy is to be represented by the Duke of Bourbon, the Count de Charolois is to represent the Count of Flanders, the Count of Clermont is to represent the Count de Champagne, and the Count de Toulouse is to be represented by the Prince of Conti; the Constable of France is to be represented by the Marschal de Villeroy, the Marschal de Villars is to represent the High Steward, the Royal Crown is to be carried by the Marschal d'Estrees, the Scepter by the Marschal d'Uzelles, the Hand of Justice by the Marschal de Thesé, the Offerings by the Marschal de Tallard, and the Banner of France by the Marschal de Matignon. Prince Charles of Lorraine is to bear up the Train of the Royal Mantle, and the Marquess de Nesle is to carry the Mantle of the Order. The Marquesses d'Estaing, d'Alegré, de Beauvau, and de Prié, are the four Barons appointed to be left in Hostage for returning to the Abbey of St. Remy, the St. Ampoule, or Holy Vial, containing the Oyl with which the Kings of France are anointed at their Coronation. It is reported, that at the King's Return from Rheims, he will reside next Winter in this City.
